"Beaman's book proves you can have the best of everything, even in the worst of circumstances, if you are willing to work at it."

Barbara Hannah Grufferman, Author, The Best of Everything After 50

"This book beckons you to look at life and learning in a whole new way and by the end makes you better at both."

Nanci Bell, M.A., Co-founder of Lindamood-Bell Learning Processes

"Ronda Beaman can sew the Laughter Badge onto her double sash of accomplishments. LITTLE MISS MERIT BADGE is funny, poignant and meaningful."

Jerry Scott, Co-creator, internationally syndicated comic strips

"Can you live your life without feeling you are special?
Dr. Beaman answers with a hearty 'No!' and then invites us on a journey of resilience, hard work and hope that can reawaken our own exceptional selves."

Dr. Paul G. Stoltz, Bestselling Author, Adversity Quotient

Former Girl Scout, Dr. Ronda Beaman was the first recipient of the National Education Association's "Excellence in the Academy: Art of Teaching" award, as well as mother of USA Today's Most Creative Family, and is a faculty resource for the Young Presidents' Organization (YPO) University.

A highly regarded international speaker, she also directs leadership studies at California Polytechnic University and is Chief Creative Officer at PEAK Learning, Inc.

She was hooked by the age of six. The on-going, outrageous dysfunction, and denial in her life was enough to turn anyone into an addict. Nationally recognized university professor and internationally renowned speaker Ronda Beaman confesses her drug of choice was earning Girl Scout badges. Lots of them. And she never quite kicked the habit.

A humorous, yet harrowing memoir that explores the nature of resilience and the accomplishment addiction many young girls develop to compensate for growing up in a challenging environment.
